Gathered Here and There by Our Reporters and Prepared for the Busy Eagle Readers

It has been decided to run the county road back of town and past the Davis, Pendleton and Tolliver properties and turn into Main street via Webb Avenue. Just when the work will be done is not known.

The oyster supper of the O. E. S. Friday night was a success in every way.

C. E. Lawson, hustling soft drink and restaurant man of Mayking, was here and left orders for printing.

W. P. Taylor, hustling Camp Branch farmer was over yesterday. Billie says he thinks everybody in his section who tried, the past season, have almost everything they need. Mr. Taylor tells us this year he gathered over 600 bushel of nice corn, dug 227 bushels of Irish potatoes and other things in proportion.

On Wednesday evening, day of thanksgiving a dance will be given at the Hotel Daniel Boone. A beautiful Thanksgiving dinner will be spread on the day following the dance. Mrs. Wyatt who is an ideal entertainer will be glad to see all her many friends on the occasion mentioned.

The Court of Appeals overruled a petition for a re-hearing in the case of Town of Whitesburg vs. Baker, et al., involving the Salver store building at county bridge. This is in favor of the owners of the property.

Joe Bushakri has opened up a grocery and meat market here.

Mrs. Henry Nicholas returned to Elizabethtown after a pleasant visit here. Genevieve Davis went as far as Lexington where she will visit the family of L. W. Fields.

J. E. Shea bought out Joe Day and will continue the grocery and feed store in the Turner building.

Policeman Jas. O'Connor, a very affable gentleman of Jenkins, was an Eagle visitor.

Preacher Jim Whitaker, hustling business man of Blackey, was in leaving orders for printing with the Eagle.

Supt. Geo. Clark was taken violently ill a few days ago and for a time was quite sick. He soon rallied and is now fully recovered.

W. R. Amburgy of Fleming, for years a representative of the Singer Sewing Machine Company was down placing orders. Mr. Amburgy now has all the territory in the Cumberland, Linefork, and Kings Creek sections of the county too much for one man but he asks all to co-operate with him and let him know when in need of a Singer. Mr. Amburgy is not only one of the Eagles best patrons but also sends the paper to his son at Albuquerque, N. Mex.

The Eagle would like to extensively call attention to its excellent list of advertisers running in each weeks paper, but this would be too much of a task. However if you will take a casual notice you will see all advertising is high class and promoted by the best business men in town as well as other places. We are going to double our subscription list soon as well as much increase our reading and advertising space and will be able to accommodate more of our business enterprises.

Miss Estelle Sergeant returned from Lexington where she graduated from a leading business college.

What is the matter that Whitesburg's basket ball team does not get out and have some games? This is great sport and we would welcome a good game.

Aunt Jane Brashear has been quite ill but is better.

The Sheriff's office is a busy place these days with everybody paying taxes.

A. B. Collett is moving back to his old home at Cornettsville.

Attorney C. F. Kelly, of Lexington was here on business.

Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Wilcox, of Jenkins were in town today and Dr. Wilcox, who is an optician says tell the people he will be here at the special term of Court to fit them with glasses.

Tuxedo Chop for horses and mules—sold by S.T. Frazier.

Late magazines, papers and periodicals sold by Whitesburg Drug Co.

What Bill Says

"Just say that I have been taken to Federal Court, tried and fined $500 for being kind to some of my friends who were in jail in my custody," said Jailer Bill Reynolds on his return from Richmond this week. Continuing Bill said, "I want the public and all concerned to know that hereafter when the order reads in the care and custody of the jailer it means in jail and nowhere else unless otherwise directed by the courts."

Is It True?

We often get wind of what is said to be bad behavior going on at nights in the village of Sand-lick Gap. Let the officers keep an eye out and if there is anything to the rumors nip them in the bud. Plenty of good people may sometimes want to go up there.

Sergeant Wreck

Four persons in a Ford tried to cross the railroad track at Sergeant Tuesday and were hit by a running train, all being badly shocked and injured. Those in the car were two Lucas boys, Mrs. Dora Tackett and Miss Lizzie Williams, daughter of Black Bill Williams. Miss Williams was badly injured and was taken to Fleming hospital. The Ford was demolished.

Takes Nigh Cut

Last night a Ford driven by persons up the way and leaving town jumped the road at Dug Hill and went over a high bank. The car was left a wreck, and the parties in it disappeared. It is not known who they were.

Thanksgiving

Next Thursday is Thanksgiving Day, and if there ever was a time in the history of this country when the people should manifest a thankful spirit to an All-Wise Providence it is this year. In the midst of human strikes, human dissipations and evils, regular seasons have prevailed, rains have descended, storms abated, health as usual and benignant crops everywhere. Never has honest toil yielded more needed results and the farmer nestling in his little home, surrounded by plenty, and the laborer, that he still has the "staff of life," should look up in thankfulness.

Enjoyable Social

Friday evening the B. Y. P. U. met at the home of Mrs. Arch C. Adams for the monthly, social. Games such as table tennis, baseball, etc., were played, refreshments served and a good time had by all. Another social will be given soon to which all are invited. Also, come to the weekly meetings each Sunday night at six o'clock. L. E.

The Why Of It

We are here to boost and to build. No man is worse by having nice things said about him. We have yet to find men and women with wings. It will be a long time before the "Dust thou art" will all be banished from Adam's family. The Paradise shores are ringing with earth's blessed poor.

Rifles Wanted

Muzzle loading rifles made by John Shell wanted. Flint lock or Percussion lock. Must be genuine with John Shell, stamped on top of Barrel. I also buy old time guns and pistols. Powder horns and powder flasks. Address Thos. R. Spencer, Lebanon, Ohio.

SCHOOL COLUMN

Doings of the FRESHMEN

The Freshmen Class is progressing nicely, everything on the boom to success, with each one trying to accomplish more this term than ever before. And it's being done.

There are about twenty-six enrolled in the Class and all present every day, except Miss Glad Banks who has been absent for two weeks on account of sickness.

We are proud of our High School and believe this pride is shared in by our people.

The Excelsior Literary Society meets Friday afternoons and has proven a success so far. You'd be surprised to hear our boys debate.

If you don't believe Whitesburg High School is on a boom just come over and take a peep into our rooms and will see what is being done.

LOCHIEL PENDLETON, Editor

Prodigal Returns

John Riddle, of whose whereabouts a thousand questions have been asked, and whose presence has been so long missed on our streets, dropped into town Monday night and all day Tuesday was being welcomed by his many friends. He says he has been over in the "Ninth Virginia" where he says he, commanded by Col. Perry, helped cross the Red Sea. John is looking good and much younger.

Apples! A-p-p-l-e-s!

Five hundred bushels, beautiful apples right from the fine orchards of Indiana just unloaded at Whitesburg and now on sale. You ought to see them and lay in your winter's supply. Ben Davis, Grimes Golden and Pippins. Will be delivered at your home at $1.50 to $2.50 a bushel. Must be sold at once. Come and get yours now or be ready when brought to your home. At W.E. Cook's store, Main St.

W. H. MURRAY

Gradually Coming

—Dock Franklin, enterprising Sergeant merchant, was down and tells us that business is very good and improving all the time. This is the word given us by most all persons with whom we talk in the coal regions above town. It seems that nothing can now hold back this coming section of Kentucky. However, all concede that money needs to become more plenteous or rather somewhat loosened.

Dave Brown

(CONTRIBUTED)

After having been granted a respite four times by the Governor, Dave Brown, of Pike county, was electrocuted at Eddyville November 17, for the murder of James Brumfield and his four year old daughter. Brown was convicted in Pike Circuit Court in October 1921. The case was appealed to the Court of Appeals and there the findings of the lower court were sustained.

This case is a reminder that it is still possible for an individual to be put to death for willful murder, and that juries sometimes, tho' infrequently, rise to the sublime discharge of their duty and pronounce the forfeiture provided by law for willful murder, and executive clemency does not always thwart the verdict of such a jury. We are inclined to think that in the future juries will more often than in the past rise to such lofty heights and that executive clemency will be harder to obtain in cases of this sort. A few more examples of this kind would be a great boon to peace and law enforcement in Eastern Kentucky.

If men were put to death for willful murder there would not be so much of it; there would be fewer wrecked homes and orphan children. Men would not take such a risky chance, and would consider seriously before they took human life; they have heretofore believed the juries would not convict and if they did the Governor would pardon; hence there was not much danger in taking human life. If punishment of this kind was meted out more frequently there would not be from ten to twelve murder cases at each term of court on the trial docket, and each defendant therein armed with perjured testimony to present to an unstable jury.

It seems to us in the electrocution of Dave Brown there is food for thought for those who are watching the opportunity to take human life. A SUBSCRIBER

What An Idea!

This week a boy jogging along the street on being asked why he was not in school replied "Oh, I don't have to go to school; I am over the age, past sixteen." What an idea! Glad that the golden school days of youth had slipped away and now free to do as he pleased! Glad to join the phalanx of ignorance and march on to the precipices over which the unlearned are so liable to tumble. There are thousands of these in a sense the equal to all those in the past but with double the opportunity to go to ruin now than then. The houses of reform, the jails, the penitentiaries and the electric chair are to be recruited in the future mostly from those who grow up in ignorance and from those who bask in the gladness that they have dodged along to the age "when they don't have to go to school." And the poor moonshiners, trembling in the hollows of the hills, and his patrons, too, will have to be recruited from these same ranks. Many good but unthinking parents perhaps have not thought of these sad facts. The future is filmed as a great vortex of humanity struggling in the battles for existence as well as success. The armed and the qualified for battle will find it difficult enough. The impotent and the ignorant will go under the heel. When the opportunity is at hand, when the sunlight is pouring from the fountain of knowledge, then and then only is the time to seize the Alpine stock and begin the struggle. The path, tho' rugged it be, leads to a signboard inscribed "Excelsior."

Senator Hogg Dead

Ed Hogg, brilliant lawyer and former State Senator and well known over the State and especially in the mountains, died Monday at his home near Versailles. Ed Hogg was born at Whitesburg about sixty-five years ago and was a son of Hiram Hogg, a former citizen. The Hogs were among the first families to settle in this country and have always figured highly among our very best citizenship. The deceased was highly connected throughout Eastern Kentucky and one of the State's most intelligent and aggressive citizens whose influence will be much missed.

Public Sale

Our Business

It is the undisputed business of the local newspaper in its dealings with the public to call attention to things. Personally, and it generally knows positively nothing of the matters it speaks of, only getting its information from rumor. Many things are hashed over and over before we mention or call attention to them. This is because there is often nothing tangible in rumors. Under the law, the rights and liberties of all citizens are entitled to protection. The people every four years select men to do their business for them, see that the law is enforced and their rights and liberties upheld. Now, with the duties invested in their chosen apostles, goes also a duty belonging to the citizens.

If people are disturbed or their rights trespassed upon it is their duty to go to the officials and inform them of it. The officer who refuses to act is then subject to criticism. Many violations are often hid from officials who are anxious to do their duty. Tho we hear much criticism on our officers we sincerely believe every one of them are glad and willing to do their duty. Speaking of Whitesburg, we know that it is sadly in need of a good strong and sober policeman. Every good citizen stands willing to contribute liberally toward employing a man who will get on the job and stay on it. This man must be a quiet, cool and sober man—a man himself above reproach. We understand the town officials are getting to the point of lighting the streets and alleys.

We heartily endorse this move and will with every other citizen gladly pay our proportion of the expense. When this is done it will go far toward rooting up the mischievous things that are done in dark alleys and along shady streets. For sometime rumors have been afloat that gambling was going on in town. We had been told that if it was not stopped someone would be killed or get into trouble. We said nothing. We now understand that one or more of these nests have been raided and the violators rounded up. Whitesburg is the official center of the great and progressive county of Letcher and a gradually coming town. There are many things it needs very badly, and the greatest of these is a wide-awake citizenship all pulling together for the good of all. We are proud of our town board of trustees. They are doing their best to accomplish much and need the hearty co-operation of everyone.

The Ky. & W. Va. Power Co. is opening an office in the old Whitesburg Hotel building.

EDITORIAL

The ambition of the boys of 30 years ago was "struggling for the future." Day in and day out they looked ahead. Of course few if any had an idea of the future greatness of this country, but without this they wanted to be somebody, let the sphere be what it might. They recognized the fact that they or some others were to be the future builders of this country and on them would hang heavy responsibilities. The little old log schoolhouses almost daily rang with patriotic declamations and speeches and the few evils incident to that day were condemned in strongest terms. The schools of that day were the strongest builders of civilization. They were bed-rock upon which the men of today—we mean those of our old families—were built, and the Eagle has always manifested a strong pride in them. There are exceptions to the rule, of course, a dismally few exceptions, but the old blood manifested itself and came out in the clear, and, notwithstanding the fact that thousands of good citizens have come among us and become a part of our root and branch, Letcher county, today and tomorrow, is in the moulding and the making of its old lineage. Our fathers, many of them, rest in reverent quietude on the grassy knolls and list to whispering winds, the rolling storms and whirl of things of which they never dreamed and yet they speak to us, "Children, guard well, hold up the banner, your glory, your honor and your country is still in your keeping." And who are these? Every reader can recall many of them and they have been here for an hundred years and more. Pure Anglo-Saxons the best and noblest under heaven's blue vault.

INVITING BOBBY

By MOLLIE MATHER

(© 1923, by Western Newspaper Union.)

Bliss was tying morning glories on the porch vine, when the letter came. Lizzie brought it over from the post office. Bliss looked like a human morning glory—if such might be—with her soft pink cheeks and her violet eyes, and the very dancing lightness of her. The letter was from her stepmother, who spent most of the time abroad with her husband, whose business affairs called him there. Bliss and the stepmother were the best of friends, and it was this understanding friendship which left the girl in sole possession of her former home.

Lizzie, her own mother's trusted helper, was also left in charge. The girl had been given her mother's family name, and those who loved her—and there were only so many—thought it fit most appropriate name for surely the bright presence, was as they said, a "blissfully happy one" too, to make others as happy.

Bliss seated herself on a lower step to read her letter. It was written in ink of some new-found friend of her mother's. "A dear woman," the letter said, "from our own home city, who adored, had come over here, with her young daughter. I have talked with her about you, of course, Bliss darling, and she was moved to write you—her enclosed letter speaks for itself."

Bliss unfolded the accompanying letter.

"My Dear Miss Carmen: Your mother has been so kind to give you and your pretty home in the country village, I who am far from home, wish that its hospitality might be extended to your kindness, to my poor boy, left alone in the hot, dusty city. I know the Bobby is very without his mother—for, you see, he is my baby, and I'm afraid my friends are right when they say I have made myself too necessary to him. But that is a way of mothers. My little girl is with us here. I wonder if it is asking too much to suggest that you write him—just a little line, if you are busily occupied with other matters, and perhaps some time you will let him come out to see himself in your lovely old-fashioned garden; I am seeing that she is going to be a little more to mother the motherless child. So Bliss set down to her letter.

"An evening at dusk, Bliss was hearing a song from her aunt, seated just beneath the apple tree, and was looking very young, and was a mass of giggles through the hedge. He smiled, as he came near, then stooped to adjust the swing bench, which lay at the girl's feet. "Will you tell me," he inquired, where I may find Miss Bliss Carmen? An elderly lady, I would fancy her, as she is a friend of my mother. A well-meaning friend," added the man, and smiled again.

"I am Miss Carmen," she absently replied.

The man stared—rudely, she thought. "You?" he exclaimed.

Bliss nodded. "You wanted to see me?"

The man laughed. Then instantly he excused himself. "I was certain that a friend of my mother's would state you were in Bobby's letter, naturally as my mother's friend, indeed—yes, you are just a little girl in a swing."

Bliss slipped from the swing to stand before him. "What do you know of Bobby?" she asked.

The man stood up. "I am Bobby," he announced astonished. "I suppose mother is to blame for your mistake," he said. "She always refers to my sister as her little girl, though she has long been married. I to my confusion, am her 'baby,' because I happen to have been the youngest in the family. But—I did like my invitation, its true hospitality, the real thing all through."

From the open kitchen doorway came a spiky odor; Lizzie stood there curiously regarding the visitor.

Suddenly laughing, Bliss put out her hand to him. "I must keep my promise about the cookies," she said.

"And the hammock afterward?" he smiled into the violet eyes.

"And the hammock," agreed the girl.

And as they walked to the house together, he was thinking jubilantly: "That match-making mother of mine is on the right track at last."

Disappointing By Found.

A remarkable new dyestuff has been discovered that will select which piece of material it will dye and which it will not. By this means a white material can be placed in a bath of dyestuff and dyed two colors in one operation. Thus, a mixed material of cotton and artificial silk placed in a bath of the new dyestuff will come out with the cotton threads dyed blue and the silk fibers dyed red, yellow or orange, according to the particular dye used.

OH, WHAT IS LOVE!

By MARY J. HITCHCOCK

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"What did the doctor say, Sally?" Sighing heavily, Jim looked at his wife's pale face among the pillows. Under the softened light of the sick-room she looked so frail—the girlish staidness which was really one of her chief charms seemed just skin-deep. Sick for several days, she had failed to get up to prepare his breakfast as usual, and he had hurried home from work, anxiously wondering what the doctor had said.

"He hasn't been here—yet," Sally answered. "Josef phoned for him first this morning, but he said it would be late before he could get around."

"Well, how do you feel?" Jim sat down heavily on the edge of the bed.

"Oh, no worse than I've been feeling." It was the best that Sally could think of to say in an attempt at cheerfulness. "You haven't been worrying about me?"

"How can I help it?" Jim reached for Sally's hand, and noted with growing concern how hot and dry it seemed. "If anything should happen to you, Sally—"

"You would go looking for Number Two in a little while," Sally's playfulness did not irritate Jim. It seemed to make him sad.

"I'd look a long time before I found anyone like you," Sally said. "I've been here more than a little while, and I don't remember that I ever got drunk—even since prohibition—but I haven't done as much as I might—as much as I ought to have done for you."

Sally pulled her aching bones to the far side of the bed. She had never discovered this crazy strain in Jim. Alarmed, even more than a little frightened, she surveyed him incredulously.

"I don't blame you," Jim was speaking again. "I've been a brute to you—"

"You've been nothing of the sort, but you talk like a fool!" Sally snapped. Then, the humor subsided, she said, "Thank goodness! The doctor! Let him in, and stay out till he goes—"

"Jim, realize the day when he had married her. It had been a double wedding. Sally's girl chum, marrying her own brother, and Sally's brother, marrying her own sister. And it had ended in the divorce court—that other marriage."

He walked into the hall as the doctor came downstairs.

"Anything serious?" His concern was real, at least.

"Nothing worse than one of those spring colds that everybody seems to get," Jim said. "I'll be all right, but I'm a little out of bed in a couple of days."

The doctor's cheerfulness, perhaps, was the reason for Jim's haste to get upstairs. He took them two at a time.

"I believe you're all right," the doctor said. "Sally's greeting at he pushed open her door."

"Hi! Doctor said you weren't sick at all!" Sally's husband stood, springing her cheerfully now. "Such a fuss you make over nothing—getting me all worked up over your silly insinuations about dying, and all those things! Had to take it out telling me what a hard time you had of it with me. Anyone might think I was really the miscreant!"

"Hurry, if you're going to get that prescription filled tonight," Sally yawned and turned her pillow to find a cool spot. "It's after 10 now."

Jim shrugged himself into a coat and rubbed his hat with his sleeve.

"You might bring me a little ice cream," he said. "I'll be all right, but I'm a little out of bed in a couple of days."

"Bring you nothing?" Jim groaned. "You'll be coming me enough with druggist charges and doctor's bills."

But he took the stairs very softly, and Sally did not catch even an echo of the closing door as he went into the street.

In 15 minutes he was back, the much-wanted ice cream in a paper box, and Sally's favorite marmalade, flanked by a basket of selected fruit, was under his arm.

"Thought you'd be too lazy to even try to get up tomorrow," he grunted. "So, to keep you from setting me crazy I got you something to read, and, just so you won't have me running my legs off waiting on you I called Jose on the drug store phone—she's sending her girl over tomorrow to get something done in this house."

"The?" Sally sat up in bed and pecked daintily at the ice. "Your sister is a real comfort—thinks of everything, doesn't she? You are, too?" as an afterthought.

Jim paused, hung up his coat, then, standing at the foot of the bed, he looked down at Sally's smiling face.

"Taffy! Well, it won't get you anything!"

Then, when she had finished the cream, he patted the pillows and straightened the bed-clothes, tucking them in around her neck.

"Think I'm doing all this because I like to make a nurse-maid of myself?" he asked. "Well, somebody has to look out for you, and it gets wished onto me."

PAINT AND VARNISH PRODUCTS

Remove the "Blindfold" Habit Has Tied Over Our Eyes

DAILY association oftentimes makes us so familiar with the rooms we live in that we no longer really see them.

Examine your home today. Be as critically open to new impressions as a stranger. You will be amazed—shocked—to discover how much deterioration and ugliness has crept in unnoticed.

In a hundred places, indoors and out, here—there—everywhere, you will see spots that are worn, shabby, warped—spots where the beauty and value of your home are being destroyed.

Open your eyes to the immediate need of paint and varnish products in your home. And when you buy paint and varnish products, buy only the best.

Devoe products are time-tested and proven, backed by the 168 years' experience of the oldest paint manufacturing concern in the U. S. Founded 1754.
